

Imaginative-Inspirational

Imaginative-Inspirational thinkers enjoy bringing new ideas and tangible products into being. They are often attuned to atmosphere, mood and aesthetics. Their thinking draws upon intuitive processes, emotion, expression and interaction with their external world. They like to picture both past and future scenarios, and to discern underlying elements of order in disorder, harmony in disharmony, and even sense in nonsense.

Enthusiast

Enthusiast approach life with authenticity, spontaneity and passion. They tend to radiate that special something, living their lives fully engaged and meaningfully connected. Often compassionate and generous, these individuals tend to invigorate those around them and bring new vitality to situations. Others tend to gravitate toward their energy and presence. With imagination and humor, high scorers may seek pleasure and playfulness in their encounters.

Self-Confident

Self-confident people believe in themselves and win the confidence of others. Secure and assured, they are not easily swayed by someone else's arguments or persuasions. They believe in their own abilities, strengths and powers and are not burdened by doubts, and low self-esteem. They do what they believe to be right. Genuinely confident people are able to admit and learn from mistakes, and to accept compliments graciously.

Lover of Courage

Lovers of courage work to accomplish goals in the face of opposition, either internal or external. They persevere beyond threat, setbacks or pain. Typically straightforward and down to earth, they overcome fears to act on their convictions. Discouragement does not lead to defeat, but these individuals stay wholeheartedly in the game through bravery and energy. They can resist peer pressure to take a morally questionable short-cut.